FINANCIAL REPORT 2018

World Land Trust Chief Operating Officer Liz Stone summarises the financial year.

2018 was our most successful financial year since WLT was established, raising just over £4.9m. Securing support from a diverse range of sources enabled us to fund the outstanding conservation work carried out by our overseas partners. Particularly notable this year was the continued upward trend of legacy income, adding nearly £1.5m. Expenditure increased in line with income and a total of £3.6m was transferred to our partners for urgent land protection. This is £1.4m more than in 2017. For every £1 raised 92p was spent on our charitable activities and 76 per cent of expenditure was disbursed or committed to our partners. WLT continues to flourish, with strong finances, and a portfolio of exciting and innovative projects for potential funding. 2019 heralds the start of the Trust's 30th year and while we can celebrate saving nearly three-quarters of a million acres of habitat that would otherwise have been lost, we will go forward with renewed vigour and determination. The challenges remain, in terms of global politics, the exit from the EU and the reality of operating as a charity internationally, however we believe that our experience and credibility means we are poised to meet these head on to ensure our impact continues to grow.

Jungle for Jaguars

COUNTRY: BELIZE
LAND: 8,154 ACRES
TARGET: £600,000

In September WLT launched its Jungle for Jaguars Appeal to raise funds for a vital biological corridor in NE Belize.

Protecting habitat for Maned Wolves in Bolivia

2018 saw the highest number of Maned Wolf sightings in the Beni savanna of Barba Azul Nature Reserve (Bolivia) on record. The Maned Wolf is the largest canid of South America. It is neither a wolf, like its name, nor a fox, like its appearance; it is the only species in the genus Chrysocyon, meaning 'golden dog'.

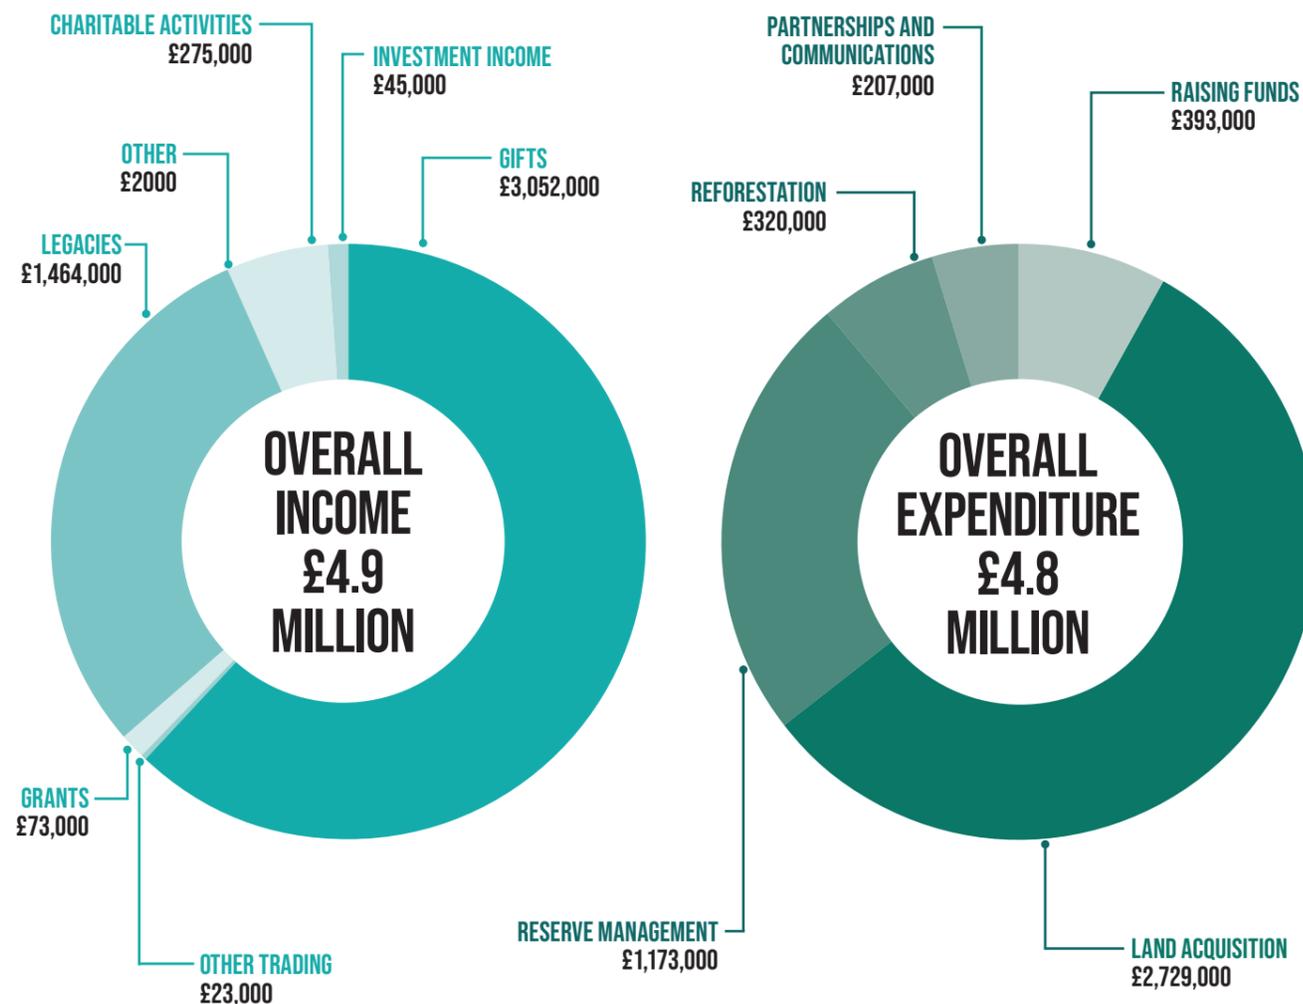

They do not form packs like wolves or wild dogs but hunt alone between dusk and midnight, which means they are rarely seen by humans. Their long legs and large ears are well adapted for hunting in the tall grasses of the savanna, where they listen out for prey and use their feet to tap the ground and flush out birds and small mammals.

Although the Beni savanna is the perfect habitat for Maned Wolf in Bolivia, with relatively few sightings previously it has been hard for WLT's partner Asociación Armonía to monitor the population. However, as sightings are on the increase, it seems the population in Barba Azul is doing very well.

Indian Pangolin protected by a new project in India

In 2018 World Land Trust formed a partnership with Applied Environmental Research Foundation (AERF) who have a mission to proliferate the cause of forest conservation to the world and bring the northern Western Ghats onto the global conservation map. Since their inception in 1994 they have been pioneering community-based protection of old growth forests. The Western Ghats mountain range runs down the west coast of the Indian peninsula and is considered one of the "hottest hotspots" of the world's 34 biodiversity hotspots.

It is home to remarkable wildlife such as Indian Pangolin, Rusty Spotted Cat, Dhole (Asiatic Wild Dog) and an endemic frog, the Wayanad Bush Frog. Conservation of this habitat and these species has been long held tradition in local communities, who protect forest fragments called sacred groves in the name of local deities. Almost every village has a sacred grove, and these safeguarded forests act as refuges for species in an otherwise diminishing landscape.

A detailed breakdown of our income and expenditure can be found in our full audited Annual Accounts which are publicly available on the Charity Commission website.

THANK YOU

We would like to thank all those individuals and organisations who have made our vital work possible and helped us save land and species from imminent threat. Thank you to everyone for your generous support.
